Fourth Sunday of Lent
Sunday of St. John Climacus

The Church calls our attention to St. John Climacus who realized in his own life the ideal of penitence on which we should fix our eyes during Lent. The Church gives a correct interpretation to the doctrine of St. John Climacus when it proclaims that ascetism has neither sense nor value if it is not an expression of love. During the liturgy we read from the epistle to the Hebrews (6:13-20). This tells of the patience and endurance of the patriarch Abraham, and of the final realization of the promises that God had made to him. It is impossible for God to lie: that is why, like Abraham, we have “strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us.” Do we really live in this great hope? The gospel (Mark 9:16-30) describes the healing of the boy with the dumb spirit, whose father brings him to Jesus. The Lord says to the father: “If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.” The father cries out with tears: “Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief.” We could find no better way to express both the fact of our faith’s existence, and of its weakness. But do the same burning tears fall from our eyes when we say to our Savior: “I believe, help thou mine unbelief”? Jesus takes pity on the father, He accepts such a faith, and heals the son. Later, speaking to the Master privately, the disciples ask him why they were not able to cast out such a spirit. Jesus answers: “This kind can come forth by nothing but prayer and fasting.” We must not imagine that prolonged fasting and repetitive prayer will suffice to give us a power which the disciples did not possess. Prayer and fasting in the deepest sense, mean a radical renunciation of self, a concentration of one’s soul in an attitude of trust and humility which leaves all to the mercy of God, the submission of our will to the will of the Lord, placing our whole being in the hands of the Father. He who - by the grace of God - reaches this state is able to cast out demons. Could we not take at least the first steps along this path. If we tried, we should be astonished by the successes that follow.

THE SYNAXARION (Plain Reading)

On March 29 in the Holy Orthodox Church, we commemorate the Martyr Mark, bishop of Arethusa, Martyr Cyril the deacon of Heliopolis and those with them; Martyrs Jonah and Barachisios of Persia and those with them; and Eustathios the Confessor, bishop of Bithynia.

On this same day, the Fourth Sunday of Great Lent, we make remembrance of our godly father, John, the author of The Ladder of Divine Ascent (or Climacus).

Verses

John, dead in the flesh and also living,
Liveth eternally, even though appearing dead and without breath.
Leaving letters, a ladder for the journey upwards,
He sheweth forth his pursuit of the journey upwards.

The celebration of his feast on this day arose from the custom prevalent in the honoring of others of this sort, that is, those who the world honored. John of the Ladder came to Mount Sinai at age 16 and remained there, first as a novice under obedience, then as a recluse, and finally as abbot until his eightieth year. One time, his disciple, Moses, fell asleep under the shade of a large stone. John, in prayer in his cell, saw that his disciple was in danger and prayed to God for him. Later, when Moses returned, he fell on his knees and gave thanks to his spiritual father for saving him from certain death. He related how, in a dream, he heard John calling him and he jumped up and, at that moment, the stone tumbled. Had he not jumped, the stone would have crushed him. John Climacus died on March 30, 606.

Through his intercessions, O Christ God, have mercy upon us. Amen.
THE EPISTLE

The Lord will give strength to His people. The Lord will bless His people with peace.

The Reading from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Hebrews, (6:13-20)

Brethren, when God made a promise to Abraham, since He had no one greater by whom to swear, He swore by Himself, saying, “Surely I will bless you and multiply you.” And thus Abraham, having patiently endured, obtained the promise. Men indeed swear by one greater than themselves, and in all their disputes an oath is final for confirmation. So when God desired to show more convincingly to the heirs of the promise the unchangeable character of His purpose, He interposed with an oath. So that through two unchangeable things, in which it is impossible that God should prove false, we who have fled for refuge might have strong encouragement to seize the hope set before us. We have this as a sure and steadfast anchor of the soul, a hope that enters into the inner shrine behind the curtain, where Jesus has gone as a forerunner on our behalf, having become a high priest forever after the order of Melchizedek.

THE GOSPEL

The Reading from the Holy Gospel according to St. Mark, (9:17-31)

At that time, a man came to Jesus, kneeling down and saying unto him, “Teacher, I brought my son to you, for he has a dumb spirit. And wherever it seizes him, it dashes him down; and he foams and grinds his teeth and becomes rigid; and I asked Thy Disciples to cast it out, and they were not able.” And Jesus answered them, “O faithless generation, how long am I to be with you? How long am I to bear with you? Bring him to Me.” And they brought the boy to Him; and when the spirit saw Jesus, immediately it convulsed the boy, and he fell on the ground and rolled about, foaming at the mouth. And Jesus asked his father, “How long has he had this?” And he said, “From childhood. And it has often cast him into the fire and into the water, to destroy him; but if Thou canst do anything, have pity on us and help us.” And Jesus said to him, “If you can believe, all things are possible to him who believes.” Immediately the father of the child cried out and said with tears, “Lord, I believe; help my unbelief!” And when Jesus saw that a crowd came running together, he rebuked the unclean spirit, saying to it, “You dumb and deaf spirit, I command you, come out of him, and never enter him again.” And after crying out and convulsing him terribly, it came out, and the boy was like a corpse; so that most of them said, “He is dead.” But Jesus took him by the hand and lifted him up, and he arose. And when Jesus had entered the house, His Disciples asked Him privately, “Why could we not cast it out?” And Jesus said to them, “This kind cannot be driven out by anything but prayer and fasting.” They went on from there and passed through Galilee. And Jesus would not have anyone know it; for He was teaching His Disciples, saying to them, “The Son of man will be delivered into the hands of men, and they will kill Him; and after He is killed, He will rise on the third day.”
